

Being Wild

by Eddie Barnes

9th January 2016

I saw lots of stuff on our roof. I wanted to know what it was and why it was there.

'Moss,' said Mum. She told me that it grows on the roof tiles and the rain has pushed it off.

So we looked up Moss and found that it's a plant and there are 600 species of moss in our country! Some of them are in trouble.

Why? Lots of people don't like moss, it grows in the cracks between the paving stones. We think it looks pretty, but not everyone does.

I think it looks so lovely and soft that the Queen could lie down on it!

The birds like it for their young.

It is a beautiful bright green.

Hooray for moss!!!

